Dear Mr Garnier,

During David Cameron's interview with Jeremy Paxman on Friday evening he let slip that the Tories wanted to see the government step back from supporting the East Midlands, where Mr. Cameron claims government support is 'too big'.

However, true to form Mr. Cameron refused to say where the Tory axe would fall.

The public sector here in Harborough provides vital services to local residents - particularly to the most vulnerable in our communities - and employment to about 17 % of workers in the East Midlands. People will be very concerned about the threat posed by the Conservative Party.

Despite the tough times the Conservatives plan for public services and employment here in Harborough your party continues to believe that providing tax cuts for millionaires is a priority.

At this election Labour has made a clear pledge to protect frontline investment in childcare, policing, our schools and our NHS.

This latest admission by Mr. Cameron comes on top of your plans to scrap EMDA, our Regional Development Agency, which has helped bring investment to our area and improve the local economy.

This election gives people here in Harborough a chance to have their say on the future of our vital public services.

I offer you the opportunity to distance yourself from David Cameron's plans to leave areas like ours without the support they need to succeed or, if you do not wish to disassociate yourself, you should spell out exactly which services here in Harborough you and your party would cut.

Yours sincerely,

Kevin McKeever
